OUTLOOK AND STRATEGY

Inflation eased in May to 3.1% for 3.4% a month ago. The deceleration of food prices and transport fares have pulled inflation lower than expected. With inflation firmly within its expected range, the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas (BSP) may have been encouraged to continue keeping its key rates unchanged.

Remittances for the first four months of the year reached USD10.0 billion, 4.7% higher compared to the same period last year. Remittances remain resilient despite persistently low crude oil prices. Meanwhile, bond yields generally eased in June as investors speculate that the BSP will keep rates steady as inflation continues to be manageable.

We still believe that the BSP will eventually raise rates in the coming months as the interest rate differential between the US dollar and the Philippine peso continues to narrow. In addition, a persistently weak peso may also compel the BSP to tighten accordingly. The Fund remains very defensive with portfolio duration of around 3 years
