OUTLOOK AND STRATEGY

The market continued to correct as investors shook-off unreasonable expectations that pushed valuations to unsustainable levels. The PSEi fell by almost 6% month-on-month to 7,980. We expect the market to remain weak as it faces strong headwinds. Several capital raising exercises, mainly stock rights offering and a follow-on placement of a major conglomerate will likely siphon market liquidity. The continued weakness of the peso has also discouraged foreign funds from holding Philippine equities. Overseas the brewing trade war amongst major economies and tensions in North Asia have kept investors cautious. However, investors should closely watch the market as value is starting to emerge in some stocks.
