OUTLOOK AND STRATEGY

The benchmark PSEi dropped by 7.4% to 7,277 month-on-month as the market continues to be weighed down by the deteriorating terms of trade and current account, rising inflation, higher interest rates, and a weak peso. It also did not help that corporate earnings growth for the first half was an underwhelming 8%. Overseas the escalating trade conflict amongst major economies and contagion fears being generated by Turkey and Argentina were additional headwinds faced by local equities.

Foreigners have been net sellers, unloading USD213 million worth of equities in September alone and about USD1.5 billion year-to-date. Sustained foreign selling has substantially contributed to the current market weakness.

Reckoned from its recent peak, the PSEi is now behind by 19.7%, a shade above bear territory. But value is slowly emerging. At current levels, the market is trading at 15.6x full year 2019 earnings. This multiple compares favorably to the 10-year average market earnings multiple of 17.2x.
