OUTLOOK AND STRATEGY

The PSEi extended its rally in June, up 6.3% MoM, as it joined a global rally on hopes of an economic recovery. It has rebounded 34% from its low in March, and foreign investors were back to pouring money as expectations of a recovery are anticipated since lockdowns in NCR and neighboring areas have eased starting June 1. The further strengthening of the Philippine Peso vs the US Dollar provided an added boost to foreign investor's returns.

June welcomed a slew of dismal economic data releases. Foremost among them are April unemployment rate of 18%, May PMI of 40.1, March OFW remittances of -4.7%, and April exports of -51%.

The market will brace for a looming technical recession (two consecutive months of economic decline) given the aforementioned economic data and probably worse than expected earnings numbers due to a nearly full lockdown of the economy in 2Q 2020.
